

CORPORATE GOVERNANCE
AND SUSTAINABILITY REVIEW*Volume 4
(special issue)/2020

We would like to draw the attention of the experts in corporate governance and sustainability that international peer-reviewed journal Corporate Governance and Sustainability Review announces a call for papers for the special COVID-issue (2020) of the journal.

The worldwide COVID-19 pandemic has impacted countries, the global economy, locked down societies and changed communities for the better, and at times, for the worse. This CGSR special issue welcomes submissions on theoretical and empirical contributions that look at the impact of COVID on:

- corporate governance and sustainability;
- neoliberalism and neo-Keynesian economic policies and models;
- global governance;
- business-government relationship;
- business-society relationship;
- board behaviour and practices;
- multi-stakeholder practices;
- responses by governments;
- responses by institutional investors, sovereign wealth funds and other major investors;
- responses by minority investors;
- responses by family-owned businesses;
- responses by state-owned enterprises;
- the importance of technology and board practices;
- role of mainstream media and social media;
- environmental impact and environmental governance;
- discourse of governance;
- and other related issues to corporate governance and sustainability.

For more information on whether your submission will fits this special issue, please contact the Guest Editors.
